Bullock meets with “Outside Magazine’s” Best Employers

HELENA – Yesterday, Governor Steve Bullock met with the Montana employers who were selected as some of the top employers in the country in 2013 by Outside Magazine.

Bullock invited the businesses to meet with him to talk about the benefits of doing business in Montana, as well as highlighting their efforts to expand their companies, the important role that Montana’s outdoor heritage plays in their businesses and innovative methods they’ve used to recruit and retain employees.

“Montana is a great place to do business, and these employers serve as an example for how to recruit and retain top-tier Montana employees,” said Bullock.

After the meeting at the Capitol, Bullock and the business leaders took advantage of Helena’s outdoor recreation opportunities by hiking Mount Helena.

“Montana’s hiking, fishing, skiing and other outdoor activities are unmatched,” Bullock said of the hike. “Many of these businesses have leveraged Montana’s quality of life to not only bring new customers to their business, but also to entice talented Montanans to work for their business.”
